History of the Malibu Coast American Viticultural Area

The first known Malibu Coast vineyard was planted in the early 1800's by a Spanish General Jose Bartolome Tapia in the area known today as Serra Retreat. By the mid 1800's Matthew Keller had purchased the Rancho Topanga Malibu Sequit and planted hundreds of acres of wine grapes in Solstice Canyon which he named the Rising Sun Vineyard. Today there are more than fifty vineyards along the Malibu Coast producing world-class wines.

The Malibu Coast Vintners and Grapegrowers Alliance endorses and partners with several groups to educate and promote responsible and sustainable farming and winemaking practices. Our members are committed to protecting the environment, educating the public, water conservation, sustainability and practice sustainable farming and winemaking while producing world class wines.
